'Liquid Heat' Is New Home Plan

Heating Medium Designed to Supply Power for All Utilities in House.

New Power Source.

Engineers of the Consolidated Edison company of New York have developed what they call a "liquid heat" system of heating homes which would employ equipment now used in the generation of electricity.

The Chairs pictured above are the home would employ. Instead of the ordinary furnace, the system would employ a boiler in the basement which would burn oil. The heat would be carried to the various rooms by a liquid medium, which would circulate through pipes to radiators in each room. The liquid would be heated in the boiler and then pumped to the radiators, where it would give off its heat and return to the boiler to be heated again. The system would be used for heating and air conditioning in summer.

Engineers say that the system would be more economical than present methods of heating homes and would be free from dirt and smoke.

Car Run Generators.

The system is designed to operate on electricity from the power lines, but as an emergency measure the boiler could be heated by a gasoline engine which would drive a generator to produce the electricity. The engine would be started automatically when the power failed.

The system is designed to operate on the principle of the vapor cycle refrigerating machine. Water is used as the heating liquid because it is cheap and can be used for heating and cooling. Water is heated to a temperature of 212 degrees Fahrenheit at the boiler and then pumped to the radiators, where it is condensed, giving off its heat. The water is then returned to the boiler to be heated again.

Even low pressure steam is used in the radiators to prevent leaks and used to operate the system in areas of low pressure.

Thirty-four engineers have been assigned to the project and have designed a scaled model of the system. It has been in operation for several months and has passed the tests successfully.

Lake's Lure Cures Vets Of Allergy for Boats

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — Fishing starts a cure for allergy in veterans at Lake Hamilton here. Doctors say it's the first time they've known of such a cure.

Many veterans went to the army because they were allergic to fishing. In fact, boating has proved one of the most effective therapies for the 1,000 veterans now in the hospital on the center's Lake Catherine lodge. The doctors say that more than a hundred spendthrifts at the lake have bought boats since the war started, and a number of other fishing craft.

Who is peacefully resting there.

Civil War Veteran Finds His Kin After 44 Years

CHICAGO. — Mrs. Ethel Garrick, of 3947 S. Langley avenue, learned that her 98-year-old grandfather, John Pomeroy, who vanished into the Alaskan wilds 44 years ago, was alive and well.

In a veterans' home in Napa, Calif., the civil war veteran and Indian fighter longed to receive word of his children for Christmas. A New York company located his one surviving daughter, Mrs. Mary Clidence of 3250 E. Colonial drive, Orlando, Fla. Four other grandchildren are scattered throughout the country.

Pomeroy left the country in 1900 to search for gold in Alaska and quit communicating with his family a short time later.

55 Villagers Murdered By Nazis in North Italy

NEW YORK. — Fifty-five men, women and children out of the 200 inhabitants of the Italian village of Madonna Dell Albero, near Ravenna, were massacred by Nazi SS (Elite Guard) troops.

An overseas dispatch to the OWI said Lieut. H. N. Acker of Toronto, a signals officer of the Canadian First division, has revealed the massacre after talking to the remaining villagers. Acker, the dispatch said, had arrived at the village as the last 31 of the victims were being prepared for burial.

The Germans were angry, the villagers said, "because they suspected some of the men had gone to the Allied lines with information."

To the People of this Community

"My Thinking — My Money — My Time will stay in this war to the finish."

Ted R. Gamble, National director of the War Finance Division and leader of the millions of volunteers who are selling you the extra War Bonds needed to beat the Japs and complete the war job in Europe, put the wartime credo of Americans in these 14 words.

It's good advice to follow not only during war loans but every day. You can't help too much to win a war.

Today's community and national war loan totals should reflect your personal determination to see the war through. Regardless of what the War Bond score is today, it is not high enough unless you have gone to bat and bought bonds to the actual limit of your buying power.

South America Haven For Many Immigrants

Apart from the Spaniards (and the Portuguese and the French in Brazil and Haiti respectively) who, of course, constitute the basis of its population in the same way as the English do in the United States, Latin America has absorbed large contingents of immigrants not only from Africa but from many other parts of the world. Italians came in great numbers to Brazil, to Argentina, to Peru. Buenos Aires has become a larger Italian city than Rome and there are a million people of Italian descent in Sao Paulo alone.

Southern Brazil and Chile have seen the arrival and establishment of large colonies of Germans, while English, Scotch and Irish immigration accounts for the number of names of Anglo-Saxon origin in several of the South American countries and principally in Chile whose national hero is Bernardo O'Higgins. The Poles, the Russians and the people of the Balkans are also found in notable groups throughout Latin America. The Japanese are particularly strong in Brazil and Peru while Chinese are found chiefly in Mexico, Peru and Cuba. In Havana there are reported to be about 70,000 Chinese, mostly Cantonese." An interesting experiment in colonization is that of the Mennonites in the Chaco region, while in recent years a great many Jews of European extraction have come to seek tolerance and liberty in Latin American countries.

While in many areas of Latin America the natives have completely disappeared, they still form the backbone of the population in some countries of Central and South America, especially along the West coast. These countries are precisely those where the Indians were organized in a more civilized manner in pre-Columbian times and were therefore more unlikely to disappear altogether. The survival of the native population in these western regions of the continent "offers another explanation to the relative absence of Negro communities" there.
